In the same 2015 Timer Digest issue, you show me on page 2 as having 118.71 performance to year-end 2014, on the left above, and on page 24, of the SAME issue, the amount is 124.97 for three inclusive of three additional weeks. How could I advance 6.26% (124.97-118.71) in the first three weeks of January, impossible! Meanwhile, Howard's performance shows only 0.2% (124.97-124.59) gain over the same three weeks.

The bottom line is that with 127.05 on Jan 23, that I beat Howard Winell for the Top Timer in 2014 by a wide margin! It would only right for you to publish an erratum.

Side by side, do you realize that publishing to these data represent you as a fool in the public eye? Obviously this is the result of hacking, but you might also responsibly eyeball the numbers, to see if they make sense.

If you get results with cybercrime law enforcement, to prosecute this scum bag, I will let this slide. Otherwise, I will sue you in Federal Court for loss of earnings and business reputation going back to 2013, when you went into denial the first time, about my corrupted performance data on bonds, and could not explain how my data on the Dow Timing was conspicuously missing.

I know who he is, and he has usurped my Fundamental Human Rights in every possible way since 2007.

Sincerely,

Eduardo Mirahyes
